This ability is called multi-tasking and it's one of the things that makes us all a little smarter than our animal cousins. However, since we've evolved from a group-living animal, the act of multi-tasking happens more naturally to us than it does to many of our fellow creatures, which still have to rely on social cues and social learning to help them out. In this article, we'll briefly cover what multi-tasking is, give some examples of it, and discuss the benefits of multi-tasking as a digital marketing strategy. What is multi-tasking?
